Total Body Balancing Free Preview Session

Total Body Balancing is a system of manual therapy developed by Kerry D'Ambrogio, DOM, AP, PT, DO-MTP, founder and dean of the D'Ambrogio Institute, after the Body Adjustment principles of the late John Wernham, DO, of England. The D'Ambrogio Institute is endorsed by the International Alliance of Healthcare Educators and proud partner with Upledger Institute International, Barral Institute and Chikly Health Institute.

Kerry (East) Fung and Kerry (West) D'Ambrogio went to John Wernham's school, the John Wernham College of Classical Osteopathy together and were two of John's last students before he passed away at the age of 99. The Body Adjustment is a system of full body evaluation and treatment using gentle techniques characterized by the emphasis of using long leverage. It can effectively balance the body by gentle maneuver that makes the treatment a thorough and comfortable experience of the patient. Kerry (East) thinks that it was the system of treatment that radically changed his practice besides Maitland's principles of orthopaedic manipulative therapy.

Kerry (West) has further developed Body Adjustment into Total Body Balancing (TBB). It is an approach incorporating different manual therapy approaches like joint mobilization and manipulation, fascial release techniques, lymphatic drainage technique, craniosacral therapy, visceral manipulation, muscle energy technique, positional release technique, and others. The template of treatment can help the practitioner easily assess and treat the body as a whole and to incorporate different treatment approaches into the holistic treatment. It is a 4-level program leading to an internationally recognized award from the D'Ambrogio Institute.

Kerry (West) is coming to Hong Kong in person to teach Level 1 of the TBB program in July. In order to facilitate the understanding of the TBB approach, Kerry (East) is going to present a free preview seminar to the audience.
